crackpro4all.com/wp-admin... khophanmem24h.com/downlo... crackwill.com/revit-... I know that there is at least one website I can download Revit for free. I was told about the communication of my teacher arc and I just don't remember that the link had any help to be appreciated. crackwill.com/revit-... As a subcontractor, we provide our client with Revit and Autocad drawings and models together with Excel Spreadsheets. We received a letter from the customer's director stating that we were using pirated/hacked/unlicensed software. My concern is that we only provide them with ready-made output files and do not share their wireless network or their LAN network. We have a fully independent local and wireless network and only share the final output of files via email/transfer/dropbox etc. How can they determine the licensing status of our software? Can they do this by looking at the output of the file? Can the inference file have any metadata relating to the details of licensing the creator's software? By the way the client is working on a multi-billion dollar project and they may have the savvy IT department to investigate such things. How do Autodesk and Microsoft police license, especially for large industrial sectors? Thank you in advance. Page 2 72 comments For all the entrepreneurs out there. Make sure you run a VPN if you use software that is not 100% cleaned. I'm not promoting an act of piracy, but let's be realistic not all debuts a small company can afford software that can cost up to 10,000 and pop I've just been reminded that recently a bunch of aggressive American lawyers after using the famous CAD engineering software with a 10K license illegally and had to face extremely heavy driving. Be smart and use VPN and PRIVATE p2p servers. Never http links to access to medicine. And once you can afford it, buy the software. # Page 2 29 comments
